Natural Therapists need a blue card

If you treat children or are associated with children in your practice, you will need to apply for a blue card.

The Commission for children and young people and child guardian advise that any person carrying on a business as a health service must be the holder of a "Blue Card" as defined under the Act.

"Health service"

A health service means any of the following –

- a. a service for maintaining, improving, restoring or caring for a person's health or wellbeing that is any of the following–
- a. a service provided at a hospital, community health facility or other health facility;
  - b. a medical service;
  - c. a service provided by a midwife or nurse within the meaning of the Nursing Act 1992;
  - d. a service provided by a paramedic or ambulance officer;
  - e. a service providing personal care to a person who is ill, injured or otherwise infirm;

Examples of providing personal care –

- a. help with personal hygiene
- b. help with dressing
- f. a service providing respite care;
- g. a service provided by a practitioner of hypnosis, naturopathy, acupuncture or another form of natural or alternative health care;
- h. a massage service, including a massage service for relaxation;
- i. a service that is of the nature of, and provided as part of, a service provided by a registered health practitioner or a service mentioned in subparagraphs (i) to (viii);

Examples for subparagraph (ix) –

- a service provided by a student on a practicum placement as part of the student's training to become a registered health practitioner
  - a service provided by an aide to a natural or alternative health care practitioner
  - a service provided by a ward assistant whose duties include lifting and turning bedridden patients or moving patients from place to place in a hospital
- j. a service prescribed under a regulation to be a health service.

Registered health practitioners do not have to have a blue card. This includes Chiropractors and osteopaths, provided they do not use therapies not defined by their Act. This means if they use acupuncture, herbs or give nutritional advice then they need a blue card if they treat children.
